

When you have a really short word, with a vowel at the end, the vowel usually says its name.

There are two exceptions.

Very few words end with an i where the i says its name. Usually, the letter saying /I/ is a y.

Very few words end with an a where the a says its name. The sound for a is usually /u/.