

stork

A stork is a large, long-legged, long-necked bird. They wade in water and use their long stout bills to eat fish, insects, earthworms and even small birds, reptiles, amphibians, and mammals.

Storks are often associated with the arrival of new babies. No one is sure about how this myth began, but there are lots of theories!